Work Offered

The current trend in Indian cities suggests an exponential increase in private vehicle users ultimately resulting in various issues like congestion, pollution, etc. Safety has been the major concern of every administrative body related to urban streets. In response to this, lots of cities are putting their focus on making public places and streets more walkable. This study focuses on analyzing the reasons for the choice of different modes in a city which affects the modal split of the city. The study also evaluates the current condition of infrastructure present in the urban streets which affects the safety and walkability in that region.
